

FREE CUSTOMER SERVICE TRAINING

October 11, 2018

Session I — 9:30 – 11:30am

Session II — 1:30 – 3:30pm

LYNNE LOCHEN

Lynne received her undergraduate and graduate education from Florida State University and has worked in the fields of hospitality and education for over 35 years. She is a former high school teacher and adjunct professor in tourism at Norfolk State University, and is listed in Who's Who Among America's Teachers. Lynne began her career in hospitality with the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, and went on to serve as director of convention & visitor services for Norfolk, where she developed a customer service training program for front-line employees, including taxi drivers, bus drivers, and hotel and attraction workers. She later served as the tourism director for Portsmouth and then for Orange County before becoming a tourism development specialist for the Virginia Tourism Corporation, the state's official tourism agency. Now retired from that agency, she travels around the state speaking on customer service and tourism marketing. Lynne has conducted customer service training for numerous tourism entities, as well as for municipalities, government agencies, civic groups, businesses, and tourism conferences.
